Davis, pp.708-712. The Chicago style is the most used in the field of history, although it is also used by other disciplines based on humanities. The first edition 3 the Manual was published in 1906 by the University of Chicago Press. The Chicago style offers two options for 3 documentation: 1. SuperIndex numbers within a document to designate paraphrased, summarized or quoted material, which correspond to footnotes or endnotes that specify the author, title and page(s) cited. 2. (Author's date) citations between pairs al al ,sosac sobma nE .odatic o odimuser ,odaesarfarap lairetam racidni arap otnemucod nu at the end of the article includes full citations of all sources referenced in an article. In addition, it may include sources that the author consulted but did not paraphrase, summarize or cite. The APA style is the format that is normally required for students who are writing essays and reports for courses in psychology and social sciences. This style is similar to MLA, but there are small but important differences. For example, the APA format requires fewer abbreviations in citations, but places more emphasis on publication dates in annotations. The author and date are indicated whenever information from an external source is used. They are placed in parentheses immediately after the material cited, unless you have mentioned the author's name in your text. If the author is indicated in the text flow of the essay, the date is indicated in parentheses immediately after the material cited. For example: During the outbreak, doctors thought that the psychological symptoms were unrelated (Juarez, 1993). If the author appears in the text, just put the date in parentheses. For example: Juarez (1993) has analyzed many reports written by psychologists directly involved in the studies. When citing a work with two authors, the surnames of both authors should be cited. Use an ampersand (&) to separate the names in the quote, but use the word and in the text. For example: The small tribes along the Amazon that have survived over the centuries have evolved in parallel (Hanes & Roberts, 1978), or Hanes and Roberts (1978) state that the ways in which the small Amazonian tribes have evolved over the centuries are similar to each other. Sometimes you will have to cite a work of three to five authors, if so, cite them all in the first reference. Then, in subsequent citations, indicate only the name of the first author followed by et al. For example: Living on the road for weeks to the It has been related to many negative emotional, psychological and physical health problems (Hans, (Hans, Martin, & Varner, 1999), and then: according to Hans et al. (1999), lack of stability is an important factor. If you use a text that has six or more authors, cite the surname of the first author followed by et al. and the publication year. The complete list of authors must be included in the list of works cited at the end of the article. For example: as Carnes et al. (2002), the immediate Vigulum between an born recipient and his mother has been widely studied by many disciplines. If you are citing a corporate author, you must indicate the full name in each In-Text reference followed by the publication date. If the name is long and the abbreviated version is recognizable, it can be abbreviated in subsequent references. For example: the new statistics show that having pets improves emotional health (United Pet Lovers Association [UPLA], 2007). The type of pet seems to make little difference (UPLA, 2007). If it is necessary to cite more than a work of the same author published in the same year, differentiate between them in the appointments in paragraphs placing them in literacy order in the list of references and assigning each work a mini lyrics. For example: â "the ants and plants that love" Kevin Walker Seras Walker, 1978a, while his "Bonanza" Beetle "would be Walker, 1978b. If you have material written by authors with the same last name, use the first initial of each author in each appointment to distinguish them. For example: K. Smith (1932) wrote the first study carried out in his state. The material obtained from sources such as letters, personal interviews, telephone calls, etc., must be recorded in the text with the name of the person, the identification personal communication and the date on which said communication was obtained or made. For example: Craig Jackson, director of Passion Fashion, affirmed that changing color dresses are the wave of the future (personal communication, April 17, 2009).
